KNEESE DEFEATED BY JAMES S. JAMES

A heavy vote was cast in San Mateo county last Tuesday, some 20,000 voters going to the polls. The great interest of the voters seems to have been in the choice of a county surveyor, George A. Kneese., who has held the office for twelve years, being defeated by Jomes S. James, of Burlingame, the final figures showing that James received 11,920 votes, while 9,215 voters favored the retention of Surveyor Kneese.

County Surveyor Kneese issued a statement the day following the decision of the voters, promising aid to the successful candidate. In this statement, Surveyor Kneese said:

"I take this opportunity to thank the thousands of my friends who responded so nobly to my candidacy for re-election as county surveyor.

"It is gratifying indeed to feel that I have the confidence of so many of my fellow citizens.

"To James S. James I extend congratulations upon his election as my successor. He conducted an able campaign and he won the laurels of the race. Mr. James will find me ever ready to co-operate in the advancement of San Mateo county."

Mr. James, the successful candidate for surveyor, issued the following statement:

"The result of the surveyor's race in yesterday's election seems to me to be a fine compliment to the hundreds of volunteer workers all over San Mateo county, who so generously donated their time and efforts in behalf of my candidacy.

"On my part, I wish at this time to renew the same pledge of policy made all through the campaign. I expect a busy four years in reorganizing and administering the office of county surveyor for the advancement of San Mateo county as a whole and for the benefit of its citizens and taxpayers."

The race for justice of the peace in the First township was of great interest to the voters in this section. The incumbents, Judge Ellis C. Johnson and Edward Farrell, were re-elected. The returns in the justice of the peace race show: Johnson, 3,781; Farrell, 3,404; Knutte, 3,093; Clay, 2,280.

On the coast Manual J. Bettencourt wrested the justice of the peace job away from William Wightman, incumbent, by a vote of 384 to 326, a lead of just 58 votes.

The size of the Rolph vote in San Mateo county, while expected, sets a new mark for gubernatorial contests in this county. Governor Rolph's plurality over Young will probably approach 15,000 when all of the votes are counted.

Califorina voters rejected one-half of the twenty-six propositions on the ballot, it is indicated by returns from all parts of the state.

Bond issues found favor, as $65,000,000 in bonds were voted in three measures. These were a $20,000,000 veterans' bond issue, No. 1 on the ballot, and a $10,000,000 issue for improvement of San Francisco harbor, No. 9 on the state ballot, and a Northern California issue of $35,000,000 for building a bridge across Golden Gate.

A proposal to close certain business houses on Sunday was overwhelmingly defeated, as was an act to give California daylight savings time in the summer.

In San Francisco an amendment to the city charter providing a 25-year franchise to the Market Street Railway Company, which competes with the Municipal line, carried.

Mayor James Rolph, of San Francisco, was elected governor by an overwhelming majority, carrying the entire state ticket to victory with him. All of the Republican incumbent members of the state house of representatives were re-elected.

Survey of the casualties of the Democratic landslide throughout the nation in the election Tuesday, now nearly complete, disclosed the control of the seventy-second Congress hanging in the balance.

The Republicans, according to the latest returns, have lost their majority in the Senate, and if they have maintained a majority in the House, it is by the barest margin.

W. H. CLARK ENDS LIFE IN BURLINGAME HOME

A few hours after returning from a protracted Eastern trip, Warren Hopkins Clark, member of a prominent and wealthy San Francisco family, walked to an upstairs room of his Hillsborough home Wednesday night and fired a bullet into his brain. He died shortly after arrival at Mills Memorial hospital.

His wife of three years, the former Dorothea Williamson, seated downstairs, heard the shot, she told police, and rushed to the side of her dying husband.

Clark left no notes and had given no intimation of ending his life, according to friends, who ascribe the suicide to ill-health.

Several weeks ago, they declared, he suffered a nervous breakdown, to recuperate from which he undertook a trip from which he had just returned.

Friends also declared that Clark had been despondent since the death of his father, Warren Dearborn Clark, last May.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY LUNCHEON

On Wednesday of last week Mrs. I. Roberts, of Winchester street, entertained a group of friends at a surprise luncheon in honor of her birthday. The table was artistically decorated in green and yellow. A large fancy decorated birthday cake was the center-piece. The luncheon was baked Virginia ham and all the trimmings that go to make a Southern dinner complete. There were eighteen ladies present to enjoy Mrs. Roberts' hospitality. The hostess received many lovely tokens from her friends.

FACES MURDER CHARGE

Chin Chew, 30, San Mateo Chinese cook, accused of slaying Fook Sheu September 13 in a Chinese store at San Mateo, was held to answer on a charge of murder following a preliminary hearing.

SOUTH CITY PLANS AVENUE LIGHTING

Preliminary plans for the installation of boulevard lights on Grand avenue are being prepared by the city engineer of South San Francisco, following a meeting of the South San Francisco City Council, when a motion was made that plans be prepared.

According to a survey made by Mrs. Carrie Winterhaulter, secretary of the Grand Avenue Development Association, advocating the new lighting system, approximately ninety-eight electrolier standards will be required to properly light the mile and a half length of thoroughfare, from Division street to Old Mission road.

If the plans of the association are carried out, two light electroliers will be installed the entire length of Grand avenue, instead of only in the business section.

It is estimated that the installation will cost about $200 for every 50 feet in the business section, and $125 for every 50 feet in the residential section.

DALY CITY WINS LEAGUE CONTEST

After playing two erratic league games, the Daly City Merchants' nine finally came to life last Sunday to defeat the Glen Park Merchants, 7 to 1, on Jackson diamond.

A change in spirit among the local players, coupled with the smart pitching of Al Toole, without a doubt meant vistory for the Merchants.

Daly City played the strongest teams in the American division during the previous two weeks, which caused them to turn in ragged fielding games. This fact alone was their stumbling block. Only one error was chalked up in Sunday's tilt.

Al Toole, Daly City pitcher, allowed the opposition nine scattered hits, and in all but one occasion the batter was stranded. Al struck out six would-be hitters and walked one.

Daly City bunched seven of their twelve hits in three innings to drive across all of the runs. Rettig, Toole, Aiello and Strand were the Merchants' big guns at bat.

The fifth game of the Spalding league finds Daly City opposing the Napa Soda Thirties. These teams are about as closely matched as any two in the league. Besides having a bearing on the championship prospects of these teams, this contest will be fought only as bitter rivals can fight.

A SERMON FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Specially designed for young people between the ages of 14 and 84, the pastor of Grace Presbyterian church will preach a sermon in Grace Presbyterian church on Sunday at the 7:45 service. Are young people worse today than in the past decades? Can we be strict in our requirements of young people? Is there any harm in—a variety of things which young people indulge in? What does Christ expect of young people? The pastor promises to deal with these questions without fear, favor or compromise.

HALLOWE'EN COSTUME PARTY

Miss Eleanor Olson, of Willits street, entertained a group of friends Hallowe'en night at a costume party at her home. The home was most artictically decorated with streamers of orange and black. A buffet supper was served by the hostess. The evening was spent in dancing and playing games. The guests included Stephen Armstrong, Irene Malakowski, Frank Davison, Albert Perada, Marion Hackley, Marie Pfeifer, Bob Iron, Leon Roth, Dolores Messier, Frank Specht, Dorothea Monette, Robert Van Houte, Gladys McLaughlin.

JEFFERSON WINS GRIDIRON BATTLE

The Jefferson high school eleven defeated Half Moon Bay, 12 to 6, last Friday in the final "B" league contest. This victory puts Jefferson and South San Francisco into a tie for the minor division title.

The local gridders entered this game confident of an easy victory, but only after playing three quarters and all but two minutes of the fourth did they emerge with a winning score.

Jefferson held a 6 to 0 margin at half time and had prospects of building up a greater lead, when a fumbled put Half Moon Bay in a position to score, and this one chance could not be denied. A 31 yard pass, Ferriera to Ricci, late in the third quarter was the touchdown play.

Fighting hard to break the tie that would give South San Francisco the championship, Jefferson staged a desperate offense to score another touchdown in the closing minutes of play. The Indians divided their efforts into two seperate marches of 40 yards each to tally. SoRelle, fullback, crashed through tackle from the 5-yard line to cross the fnal marker.

Jefferson gained a total of 238 yards during the afternoon and made thirteen first downs, while Half Moon Bay was gaining 159 steps and four new starts. The Artichokers advanced the ball 53 yards by passing, compared with 31 for Jefferson. The officials penalized Jefferson 45 yards, and Half Moon Bay 30 yards.

Jefferson will not get a chance to play South San Francisco in a title game, due to the decision of the industrial city's school officials. They do not desire to take a chance on beating Jefferson again. You can not blame them, considering the breaks they received in their previous victory.

GIRL MEETS DEATH IN HEAD ON CRASH

Fatally injured in a head-on automobile collision on Bayshore boulevard, near South San Francisco, Rhea Nasman, aged 8, of San Francisco, died early Monday at the South San Francisco hospital. The little girl received three fractures of the skull, a brain injury and cuts and bruises when she was thrown through the windsheld of the car in which she was riding with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nessier. Her death brought the toll of week end accidents on the penisula to one dead and twelve injured.

Five others besides Rhea were in- South San Francisco police. Laxman cident, which occurred Sunday night south of the Southern Pacific underpass. Mrs. Hilda Nasman, mother of the fatally injured girl, suffered injuries about the head; Wallace Nasman, a carpenter, bad cuts about the face and head; Ruth Nasman, cuts and bruises; Karl X. Laxman, a carpenter, San Francisco, contusions and cuts; Hilda Laxman, lacerated scalp, body and head bruises.

A charge of reckless driving was placed against Laxman. According to South aSn Francisco police, Laxman, in whose car the Nasmans were riding, swerved into the south-bound traffic lane and crashed into a car driven by a man named Barrow, of Palo Alto, who was not held by the police.

MERCHANTS DISCUSS MANY PROBLEMS

There was the usual large attendance at the regular meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association last Wednesday night.

The coming Christmas celebration and the election of officers for the ensuing year were the chief matters of interest. All the old officers were retained except Julius Twesten, and John J. Fahey was elected in his place as financial secretary-treasurer.

Several new members were added to the roll, among them being John W. Harrington, of 14 Vendome street; John H. Bangs, of 6139 Mission street; and J. Mirabella, of 6000 Mission street.

After hearing the usual complaints about the storage and removal of garbage, several visiting friends were called upon for remarks. Professor Ferguson of the Jefferson Union high school spoke in an enlightening manner of the school and particularly of the facilities for athletic training.

J. J. Sweeney spoke of the need of more school rooms for the accommodation of the large number of children who have come here to live within the last few years. The population is increasing rapidly and it is only a matter of time when we will need more schools.

William Haerdter, George Augustien and Henry Warshawski were appointed on a committee to look after the Christmas celebration, acting in conjunction with Councilman Bodien.

A rising vote of thanks was given Julius Twesten, retiring financial secretary-treasurer.

MRS. GRANTHAM ENTERTAINS THE CROCKER SEWING CIRCLE

Tompsett, Mrs. Della Campbell, Mrs. F. C. Cook, Mrs. S. Millhauser, Mrs. J. Swan, Mrs. E. Bolger, Mrs. W. Grantham.

P. T. A. PLANS CONTEST TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP

The program will be furnished mostly by the children in Crocker school, or those who have attended the school. Every parent whose children go to Crocker school is cordially invited to attend this meeting. You will miss a good time, a good program, and good "eats" if you are absent. The meeting will be held in the P. T. A. room on Wellington avenue, next door to the Catholic church.

BOARD APPROVES OUTFALL SEWER

Plans and specifications for the new $146,000 outfall sewer for Colma and the southern portion of Daly City, adjoining Colma, were approved last Monday by the San Mateo county board of supervisors at their meeting at Redwood City. Protests on the petition, if any, will be heard by the board at their meeting on December 1.

The plans call for a system to carry sewage from this section across the Spring Valley properties to the Pacific ocean, where it will be carried well out from the coast. It is understood that the county has filed action for rights of way across the water properties in eminent domain.

Hearing on additions to the Woodside fire district was set for December 1, by the board, when it will hear arguments, if any, against the inclusion of the Menlo Park Country Club and other properties in the present district.

District Attorney Swart was instructed to draft an ordinance making it mandatory for carnivals, circuses and other shows to have a permit when giving performances in unincorporated area. The ordinance was ordered after the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce sent a protest to the board asking for relief, and charging that these shows evaded city assessments by going across the line into unincorporated territory. In the future they will be required to pay a fee for the permit.

William Kelting was named to be night janitor at the court house.

After listening to an insurance discussion the board adjourned to meet next Monday.

RELATIVES TAKE ACTION TO SET ASIDE CHARITY GIFTS

The will of Mrs. Viola K. Dunne, who died April 2 at her home in Hillsborough, disposing of an estate estimated to be well over a million dollars, was contested Monday in the Superior Court at Redwood City by six persons claiming to be relatives. Mrs. Dunne divided her estate among charities and friends. No relatives were mentioned.

The six, Mary G., Burke, Theresa G. Carey, Frank Weisenberger, William J. Weisenberger, Adam Weisenberger and John F. Gorman, allege that they are children of the deceased brothers and sisters of Mrs. Dunne's deceased mother, or first cousins of Mrs. Dunne.

The petitioners charge that Dr. Howard M. Engle, San Francisco, who was personal physician to Mrs. Dunne and who received $20,000 under her will, influenced her in the making of the will. They allege that she was 70 years of age and in a mental condition that could be influenced easily. The will has already been admitted to probate, and they ask that it be set aside.

In her will, Mrs. Dunne left nearly a quarter of a million dollars to the city of San Jose for a memorial auditorium to her husband; $200,000 to Santa Clara University; $100,000 to the Homeopathic Foundation, and $75,000 to the city of Hollister for a memorial park. There were numerous other bequests to charities and friends.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS FOURTEENTH ROLL CALL

The San Mateo County Chapter American Red Cross will hold its annual roll call from November 11th to 27th, and ask your fullest co-operation.

The Chapter has spent $712.53 during the past year for charities in Daly City, which include the school nurse's Ford, first aid classes for firemen and police, and the Baby Clinic.

One of these workers will call at your home during the drive: Mrs. E. H. Jordan, Crocker Tract; Mrs. E. Boyle, West End; Mr. W. H. Harman, Men's division; Mrs. J. D. O'Brien, Vista Grande; Mrs. W. H. Rickmann, Daly City chairman.

SLAYER OF CAFE MAN TO FACE PROSECUTION

John J. Hennessy, suspended San Mateo police officer, and Tom Casey, pool room owner of San Mateo, must face prosecution on charges of manslaughter despite the finding of a coroner's jury, which recommended that both men be exonerated from blame in the death of Jack Mills, Belmont cafe man.

This was the announcement by District Attorney Franklin Swart, who attended the inquest, but did not question witnesses. Exoneration was recommended by the jury at the end of a verdict which found that Mills died as the result of an abdominal wound. The source of the shot was not mentioned in the verdict.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

Construction work in San Mateo went well over the million dollar mark during the year ending October 31, according to the annual report of Building Inspector M. A. Powers.

Plans for Burlingame's annual Christmas fete and party were formulated by the merchants' committee of the Burlingame Chamber of Commerce at a breakfast meeting held last Friday.

David Bartlett, 65, incurably ill, shot and killed himself in Golden Gate park, San Francisco. The suicide occurred a few yards from the house of John McLaren, superintendent of parks.

Fatally injured when struck by an automobile, Mrs. Emma Greves, wife of David Greves, a painter, of San Bruno, died Monday night at South San Francisco hospital.

Construction of the proposed new $100,000 South Burlingame sewer system will be held up until next year or such time as its installation is believed absolutely necessary, the city council decided at Monday night's meeting.

Mrs. Margaret Shulken, 77, Burlingame pioneer, died Sunday. Death followed a brief illness. Mrs. Schulken had resided for more than 23 years in Burlingame and was known to a large circle.

Names of two San Mateo county men were drawn on the new San Francisco fedeeral grand jury for the November term. They are Albert B. Hood, San Mateo, and Merrill C. Morshead, Woodside. John H. Hunt, purchasing agent of the Pacific Gas & Electric company was named foreman.

Peter Thorsen, pioneer cafe man of San Mateo and a picturesque figure in the early-day political and social life of the city, died Monday after an illness of several months. For more than 35 years he had operated the Bohemia cafe, in San Mateo, gathering of "old timers" who recalled the hot political battles of a generation ago.

Police are on the lookout for three bandits who Sunday night held up the O'Keef service station at Peninsula avenue and California drive. Burlingame, and took $10 from the cash register.

Certificate of amended articles of incorporation of the Bear Gulch Water Company, which supplies water to the communities of Menlo Park, Ravenswood and Woodside, was on file Monday with County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese. The company incrased the number of directors on its board from five to eight, by a vote of three to two. The number of issued and outstanding shares of the corporation is 5,000.

A San Mateo county council of the American Legion was formed Tuesday night at a meeting held in the Legion clubhouse, San Mateo.

COUNTRY'S BEST HORSES TO RACE AT TANFORAN

The "Chicago" special arrived last Tuesday morning at Tanforan. Many stake horses were numbered in the shipment, including such as Tonto Rock, Nusakan, and Seths Hope.

Fourteen cars, one caoch, a Pullman, and a diner comprised the train. It made a near record time in the dash from Chicago, being routed via Illinois Central, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific direct to Tanforan siding. L. F. Rosler, Southern Pacific agent, supervised the train, while Joe Walters was in charge for the horsemen.

Four star riders were on the train. These are Guy De Peso, development of Chicago racing, Willie Moran, who rode at Tanforan last spring, Ralph West, one of America's leading apprentice pilots, and Lloyd Trimble, who rode this ummer for G. A. Cochran of New York.

With the stabling of this shipment at the San Bruno course, Tanforan is almost filled to capacity. Reservations are being held for the Audley Farm and a few other top notch stables which are scheduled to arrive late this week.

Tonto Rock headed the stable of Stuart Polk. This horse will be a contender in Tanforan stakes. Nusakan, Miss Cheyenne, Gen. Jackson, Fetching and Kit Carson came to add to the extensive string of C. B. Irwin now on the ground. Jim Parsons of Montana unloaded a powerful stable led by Seths Hope, a nominee for the $10,000 San Francisco Handicap, and Lady Seth, clever middle distance mare.

The R. C. Stable of Walter H. Hoffman, Jr., of Ventura occupied an entire car. Red Chili, Poppyfield, and Big Stuff are their three stake nominees. L. T. Whitehill had a large stable of all round campaigners.

Other owners represented were C. E. Davison, H. Roberts, M. E. Syufy, C. E. Graham, J. D. Mikel, Joe Cooper, Tim Toohey, Raymond Peternell, and F. Sharkey.

Arrangements are being made to run a special train from Los Angeles on Friday evening, November 14, direct to Tanforan, for the Inaugural on Saturday, November 15.

John Maiben, for many years one of America's "Big Three" of the turf world, is on his way to Tanforan. Maiben has been riding in the east, but the call of the west was so strong this fall that he decided to ply his vocation during the twenty-five day meeting, which opens here on the fifteenth. His most recent months were in New York. The famous jockey is under contract to John W. Marchbank.

Maiben had the mount on Display when the latter was regarded as one of the best handicap horses on the turf. He was "up" when Display was the victor in the first running of the Hawthorne Gold Cup. He won into the hundreds of thousands of dollars on the "Iron horse" for Walter J. Salmon, New York sportsman. The combination of Maiben and Display became famous. It did much to put him into the "Big Three," which consisted at that time of Maiben, Laverne Fator, and Earl Sande.

The jockey is a close friend of John B. McKee, trainer of Jim Dandy.

It is almost certain that Maiben will pilot the conqueror of Gallant For in his Tanforan engagements. His riding should give Tanforan fans something for which to look forward.

With such jockeys as John Maiben, Ralph West, Charles Corbett, Lloyd Fage, and William Johns, Tanforan racing will be the equal of that anywhere in the country. It is the aim of the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association to offer Californians a quality of sport on a par with that in Chicago, Maryland, and New York, and apparently it will succeed in its ambition.

Washington R. Norvell, racing secretary and placing judge, is an arrival from the east. Norvell has been officiating on Canadian and Mid-Western tracks during the summer. He will be called upon to make the weights on all handicaps and stakes during the meeting.

Two women candidates were nominated in Constantinople for the Turkish National Assembly, but as women have not yet the right to vote and presumably not the right to sit in the Assembly, their candidacy is looked upon as suffrage propaganda. Those of our readers who can remember that far back may recall a similar instance in this country when Mrs. Belva Ann Lockwood ran for the presidency.

People interested in sports, both amateur and professional, have been invited by Bishop Manning to assist with funds to complete the great Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City. The Bishop calls attention to the fact that the sculpture of the cathedral will include figures typifying "every kind of wholesome, legitimate sport, such as baseball, boxing, racing, wrestling, polo and tennis."

According to a statement by President Hoover, the expenses of the federal government have been reduced $67,000,000 in the last three months.

THE STORY

Garrett O'Hara, young lawyer, on his way to practice at Concho, wild western town, is shot at from ambush by Shep Sanderson, who mistakes him for Judge Warner, whom certain cattle interests wish to prevent holding court. Barbara Steelman, who thought the shot was directed at her, warns Garrett not to go to Concho because of the big cattle war. In town Sanderson picks a fight with Garrett and is getting the worst of it when Ingram, cattle baron, interrupts. Steve Worrall tells Garrett about the cattle war between Ingram and Steelman, father of Barbara. Garrett tells Ingram he desires to remain neutral, but the latter declares there can be no neutrality. Bob Quantrell, young killer for Ingram, saves Garrett and an Englishman, Smith-Beresford, from being shot by Sanderson. The three become friends.

"Which will be three weeks from today. Send me a front-seat ticket, Shep." Quantrell's voice drawled on insolently. "Did you say you had to light a shuck outa here? Well, so long, Shep. We mustn't keep you from any pressin' engagement that's shoutin' for you. Adios, compadre."

Sanderson slouched out.

The boy turned to O'Hara. "You've done wished on yoreself a man-size job. If you asked me personal I'd say you were gonna camp with Old Man Trouble."

"How long will it take me to learn to shoot?" O'Hara asked.

"If you practice real constant you'd ought to be a medium good shot in maybe twenty years. That is, if ever. Some fellows jest naturally never could be."

"But you're not that old, and they say—"

"I've got a gift thataway," Quantrell admitted modestly.

Smith-Beresford cut into the conversation: "Will you tell me, laddie, how you cut the crest of that big turkey cock? He's big enough to eat you in two mouthfuls."

"I've heard it said the Lord made us in many sizes but Colonel Colt made us all equal," the youngster replied. "Only some of us more equal than others, you might say."

"If this Sanderson is just a bully who won't fight—"

"Don't make any mistake about that, sir. He'll fight," Quantrell said carelessly.

The bartender leaned forward and spoke to Smith-Beresford. "He's killed two-three men."

"But bless my soul, if he's so dangerous, why did he take that talk from you, my lad?" the Englishman asked, much perplexed. "After all you know, you're only a boy."

The man behind the bar coughed warningly. This was dangerous ground. But Quantrell only laughed.

"Oh, I reckon he didn't have his fightin' clothes on today," he said.

"What have his clothes got to do with it? I'm dashed if I understand you."

O'Hara laughed. "That's only an expression, Mr. Smith-Beresford. What Mr. Quantrell could tell you, if he were not too modest, is that Sanderson does not want to fight with him. The fellow would probably have killed us both if it hadn't been for Mr. Quantrell's interference. We both owe him our lives."

The young desperado shrugged this aside, a little annoyed, a good deal embarrassed. "Babes in the wood, both of you. An' anyhow, I happened to want to ride Shep some. He's too biggity. Let's drink."

This ceremony concluded, the lad sauntered out of the place. Then everybody began to speak to the Englishman at once. He learned that eighteen-year-old Bob Quantrell was the most notorious killer in the territory.

Next morning the two tenderfeet bought some shells, saddled their horses, and rode out of town to a wooded draw where they used up fifty rounds of ammunition each.

After that, O'Hara and the Englishman packed their saddlebags. They rode with rifles strapped beside them. It was still a wild country. Occasionally Apaches left the reservation and went raiding. Others as bad as Indians had come in recently. But the real reason they carried rifles was that they expected to go hunting while at the ranch.

They struck Dead Horse creek and turned up it, following a wagon road that meandered back and forth with the winding of the stream. The ranch houses lay below them, a cluster of a dozen buildings set back fifty yards from the stream. Two or three men were in a corral working a dozen calves that blatted protest. At the blacksmith shop, which was outdoors under a tree, a young fellow was shoeing a horse.

The main house was a thick-walled Spanish house built of adobe bricks. A young woman was standing on the porch. She called a greeting to them. Smith-Beresford swung to the ground and went forward with the peculiar strut that characterized his walk.

"Well, we're here, Miss Steelman," he beamed. "All ready for the fatted calf, don't you know?"

"Are you the prodigal son—or Mr. O'Hara?" she asked.

"Touche," he laughed. "The answer is that we're both prodigal in our admiration of Miss Steelman."

Beneath the tan in the girl's cheeks the color moved. This young man's compliments were a little too pointed. She called to a red-headed cowboy who was passing:

"Will you take these gentlemen to the lower cabin, Red, and see they're made comfortable?" To her guests she added: "Supper at six if dad doesn't see you before them. He's out somewhere just now with Jack Phillips, I think. Please make yoreselves at home."

The days that followed were pleasant ones to both the tenderfeet enjoying the hospitality of the ranch. The life they led was a stimulating outdoor one. With the Hashknife cowboys they rode the range, chasing wild longhorns through the fragrant chaparral thickets. They assisted at branding and cutting out. They tried their hands at night-herding and trail-driving. Sometimes Wes Steelman and one of his long-bodied sons, or perhaps Barbara, rode with them and explained this unique society which cattle had created in the semi-arid West.

And every day, no matter what else they did, the two guests found time to practice with their Colts.

It cannot be said that O'Hara was easy in his mind. He had the temperament which found exhilaration in immediate danger, but the thought of peril deferred brought disturbing moments. Though he was learning how to use a six-shooter, there was no use deceiving himself into the error of thinking he stood an even chance with Sanderson. Moreover, it was likely enough that the man would shoot him down from ambush as he had tried to do once before. The knowledge that one is marked for death in the mind of a callous killer makes for depression.

His personal feud with Sanderson began to merge itself in the general one between the houses of Steelman and Ingram. He had promised himself not to become a partisan, but he was one already in feeling. The Steelmans had thrown wide open to him the door of their home. He had partaken of their generous hospitality. Why deny to himself that he wished them well in the conflict with Ingram and his supporters?

CHAPTER IV

A Rendezvous

Smith-Beresford was watching Barbara Steelman. She was saddling her pony, though a wrangler was at hand doing nothing. A minute before she had roped the animal. That was like her. She had a self-reliant, independent streak in her. Usually she preferred to do her own catching and cinching. In this case the Britisher had offered to saddle for her and also to join her on the ride, and she had contrived without hurting his feelings to reject both proffers.

The Englishman called to O'Hara, who had just come out of their bunkhouse. "If you're ready, old chap, we'll be off," he called.

O'Hara was ready. Ten minutes later they took the trail up the creek. The wagon road ended at the ranch, but a zigzag path was well defined along the stream. They followed it out of the park to the rugged hills beyond.

Toward noon they separated, Smith-Beresford working up toward the divide and his companion taking the shoulder of a hill that presently brought him above a wooded draw.

O'Hara dismounted and tied his horse. Rifle in hand, he crept forward through the brush. For he had heard the sound of breaking twigs. There was the chance of finding a deer feeding in the hill pocket below.

What he saw was even more surprising: two saddled horses grazing among the pines. Voices drifted to him from just below. He was on a bluff and he moved cautiously to the edge of it and looked down. A woman was talking. He could not at first see her face, but the figure was slender and graceful, the voice young and vibrant, just now passionately reproachful.

"I don't," she cried. "I don't. I don't. How could I when you're so—so hateful?"

"I'm hateful, am I? But you love me just the same." A man laughed, slowly, contentedly, as though he relished the fact.

"That's what you'd like—to make me love you anyhow," she went on resentfully. "It has to be all take an' no give with you, hasn't it? I'm just to be another triumph for you over my father. You want to take even his own daughter from him so as to gloat over him. Sometimes I hate you for being the kind of man you are."

The man looked down at her, his eyes close to hers. "An' sometimes you're wild about me for being like I am. Don't pull on yore picket pin, Barbara. Be reasonable. A man has got to play the hand that's dealt him. I'm not gonna lie down to Wes Steelman because he's yore dad. You know better than to ask it. Now listen. It'll be like this when we're married. You'll be Dave Ingram's wife. I won't be Barbara Steelman's husband. I'm no stray cat for you to drag home. What kind of a man would I be if I knuckled down to yore dad because you asked me to quit an' throw down all my friends? You'd despise me for it."

"I don't ask that," she cried. "All I want is for you to let him see that you're ready to compromise."

"No," he answered harshly. "Let him come to me if he feels thataway. Stop this foolishness, girl. Leave my business lay. I'll run it. Stick to this one thing an' chew on it, that I'm to be yore man an' you're to be my mate. The Bible says a woman is to leave her father an' her mother an' his kin and cleave to her husband."

"You're not my husband. You never will be if you feel thataway. I wouldn't marry you if—if you were the last man on earth," she flung passionately at him.

"No sense in sayin' that." He caught her wrists in his strong fingers. "What has drawn us together in spite of h—l an' high water? Why do you come to meet me, though you always fight an' quarrel against me because I'm like I am? You come because I'm the man you want for yore mate, because you get hungry to see me."

"No such thing," she flamed. "I s'pose you think you're so wonderful that any woman—"

He snatched her into his arms and kissed her, crushing her body to his. To O'Hara it seemed that the girl lay there a moment relaxed, drinking in his savage kiss, before she pushed him from her with all the energy of her strong arms. She flung one flaming look at him, then turned and ran toward the horses.

Ingram did not pursue her. He stood in his tracks, laughing triumphantly. "Wipe that out if you can," he called to her.

The Englishman Was Clambering Over Boulders Toward Them.

Barbara Steelman did not answer. She pulled the slip knot of her horse's bridle rein and climbed to the saddle. Swinging the animal around, she put it at the steep rock ascent which led circuitously to the top of the bluff.

O'Hara woke up to action. Presently, emerging from the draw, she would reach the clump of pines where he had tied his horse. He was caught. He could not get away without being discovered. Perhaps he could deceive her into thinking that he had not known of her presence.

Swiftly he ran for the pines. Just before he reached his horse he could see her head and shoulders riding into view. With fingers all thumbs he uncinched and dragged the saddle from the cow pony's back. He did not look around, but made himself very busy examining a galled spot on the animal's back.

A stifled little cry made him turn. Barbara had apparently come almost upon him before becoming aware of him. She had drawn up her mount instinctively and was looking at him. That she had been weeping was so plain that he thought it better not to pretend to ignore it.

"What is it, Miss Steelman? Can I do anything for you?" he stammered.

"Where did you come from? Where have you been?" she demanded.

"We've been hunting. I left Mr. Smith-Beresford to see if there was a mule deer in the hollow maybe."

"And what did you see there?"

"I—I stopped to—to look at my horse's back," he said, turning a fiery red.

"You're a poor liar," she told him bluntly. "You saw us down there in the head of the hollow, Dave Ingram an' I. Now you know what kind of a girl I am, that I rode nine miles to throw myself at the head of my father's enemy."

He was acutely distressed at her proud shame. Desperately he took the bit between his teeth and trod down his shyness.

"Yes, Miss Barbara, I know what kind of a girl you are, how bravely you've tried to keep peace between your father and Ingram. I—I honor you for everything I heard and saw."

Amazed, she looked at him, the stains of the tears still on her brown cheeks.

"You don't think I came because—because I had to see Dave Ingram, because I couldn't live without seeing him?" she demanded.

"No, I don't think that."

"Then you're a fool, for that's exactly why I came," Barbara blurted out in self-abasement.

Her humiliation, the scornful expression of it, shocked him. He could guess how much her pride was hurt.

"I don't know why you came. That doesn't make any difference. All I know is that you are good and—and fine—and that I'd want my sister to be like you."

Tears swam in her eyes. His words had gone to her heart as rain does to the roots of thirsty grass.

"You're good," she said simply. She knew that some men would not have judged her so after what they had seen.

He mumbled something inarticulate and turned to saddle his horse. She waited for him and they rode side by side along the hill shoulder. From the rocks above a high cheerful call floated down to them. "Greeting and salutations, likewise rousing cheers. Eh, what?"

The Englishman was clambering over boulders toward them.

* * * * * * *

During his first week at the ranch Smith-Beresford had several long private talks with Wes Steelman. After the last of these O'Hara was invited into conference.

The ranchman drew a cigar from his waistcoat pocket and offered it to the young man.

"Take a chair, O'Hara. Make yorself comfortable. You've been with us now a week. What d'you think of ranch life?"

"Never enjoyed myself as much in my life before. It was good of you to ask me out."

Steelman waved that aside. "Question is, would you like to go into it as a business? You've got a little money, I understand. Here's the proposition. We've bought the Widow Cress place, our friend here an' I. Would you like to go in with us? I'll be a silent pardner. If you throw in with us I'll turn Jack Phillips over to you for a foreman. Jack knows cows. You'd ought to do well, though of course it's a gamble. I'm not givin' you any guarantee. I'll be riskin' my money along with you boys."

"You've got me interested," O'Hara admitted.

"Then I'll get down to cases." Steelman drew up to a table and gave facts and figures as to the cost of the land and cattle with which to stock the range. Briefly and clearly he explained the situation.

O'Hara smiled. "I know what my answer is going to be, but I don't want to say 'Yes' until I pretend to myself that I've thought it all over carefully. Will you give me an hour or two to digest your offer?"

"Take yore time, boy," the brown cattle man told him.

"I've spent several years preparing to be a lawyer. If I go with you on the ranch it must be understood that I'm to have the right to continue with my legal work. I may later want to set up an office at Concho."

"Suits me," acceded Steelman. "I can sometimes use a bright young lawyer in my business."

"And above all I'm a law-abiding citizen. I don't intend to get into this trouble with Ingram and his friends."

The ranchman's blue eyes crinkled to a smile. "You're all right, boy. But don't make any mistake about this thing. You're in wrong with Ingram right now. If you stay in this country the only question is whether you play a lone hand an' get bumped off or throw in with us an' get a run for yore money."

"I'm not ready to accept that view of it. I've done Ingram no harm."

"Been livin' here a week, haven't you? Talkin' about going into pardnership with me, aren't you? Garret, don't fool yoreself. They've got you labeled right now, an' you can't talk 'em out of it."

The young lawyer drew up the papers of partnership and they were signed by the three parties to it. O'Hara and Smith-Beresford had their belongings moved from town to the log cabin vacated by the Widow Cress. Steelman shifted a bunch of cows to the range contiguous to Three Springs creek and the two tenderfeet busied themselves helping their cowboys burn on the Circle S. O. brand.

A young fellow drifted up the creek one day looking for a job. He reached the round-up ground at supper time and was invited by Jack Phillips to fall off and rest.

"Anything doing down Concho way?" Phillips asked casually of the visiting cowboy.

The lad hesitated, then spoke noncommittally. "There was a killin' last night. Fellow called Fitch shot Two-Ace Burke."

"Not Tom Fitch," the foreman said quickly.

"Yep."

"He's one of the waddies at our lower ranch," Phillips explained to O'Hara before he asked the cowboy what the trouble was.

"Some says one thing, some another. They had a rookus at the Gold Nugget an' bawled each other out. Friends interfered. Burke was shot on the way home at the corner of the Longhorn corral."

"Shot from ambush, you mean?"

"So they claim. Fitch was seen runnin' from the spot an' was recognized. He forked a bronc an' lit outa town. That's what I hear. Can't prove it by me."

"Much talk buzzin' around town since the shootin'?" Phillips asked.

The cowboy's eyes met those of the foreman. "Why, I slept late this mornin', Jack, havin' had consid'rable of a bun on, an' I left Concho almost right away, as you might say."

Phillips took occasion to report the result of this conversation to O'Hara and Smith-Beresford next morning.

"H—l will start poppin', looks like. Banks, the sheriff, is swearin' in a posse to run down Tom Fitch. If they catch him he'll never reach Concho alive, not with the posse Banks is sendin' out. Ingram warriors, the whole caboodle. I'm sendin' word over to the Old Man by Shorty. I dunno as there's anything he can do about it, but I want him to know what's goin' on."

After breakfast the two partners left their riders and returned to the cabin which was their ranch headquarters. As they rode up to the corral they noticed a strange horse tied to the fence.

"Some one here already," O'Hara said.

"Don't see him. Must be in the house," his partner answered.

It was the custom of the country that if nobody was at home any rider who passed that way might cook himself a meal in the cabins used by the cowboys in temporary sleeping quarters on the range. By an extension of this right some cowboy might have made himself comfortable at the home ranch house.

The partners were talking together as they passed the window of the house and turned in at the front door. Abruptly they stopped on the threshold.

A man stood in the room, revolver in hand. The weapon covered them.

"Far enough," the man snarled. "Stop right where you're at."

He was a young man, almost a boy, but for the moment at least the look on his face was almost wolfish. His body was poised and crouched, knees bent, head thrust forward.

"Who are you?" he demanded.

Probably O'Hara did not think of the maxim: When in doubt tell the truth. He told it instinctively. "My name is O'Hara. This gentleman is Mr. Smith-Beresford. We've bought this place."

The point of the revolver dropped toward the floor. "You're the tenderfoots I been hearin' about. Stayin' with Old Man Steelman, wasn't you?"

"Yes. Till a week ago. What's the matter?"

"Sorry. I had to cover you, gents. Couldn't take a chance. My name's Tom Fitch, though that don't mean a thing to you."

"We've heard that you killed Two-Ace Burke yesterday."

"Heard that, have you? What's the story they're tellin'?"

"The story we heard is that you had a quarrel with this Burke and later killed him from ambush," O'Hara said, looking straight at the man.

"I knew doggoned well they'd tell it thataway," Fitch broke out vehemently. "Nothin' like that. I don't claim I hadn't been drinkin'. I had. So when Two-Ace began ridin' me because I was a Hashknife waddy I come right back at him. Well, one thing led to another, an' I knocked him cold with my fist, me havin' given up my six-shooter at the bar. He tried to gun me from where he lay, but some of the boys stopped him. I was stayin' at old Manuel Chavez' house, an' on the way there I had to pass the Longhorn corral. It was dark as the inside of Jonah's whale. That's how come he to miss me, I reckon, for he was close as that window. I could see him by the flash of his gun, an' got Old Tried an' True into action muy pronto. My first shot hit him, an' two of the others I've been told since, I was too busy to know whether he got a second shot at me or not, an' I hadn't time to stick around, seeing as folks were headin' that way fast. So I lit outa town, lay doggo at Old Man Cowdery's in a haystack, till I found out Two-Ace was sure enough dead, an' headed for the hills."

"You'd better eat your breakfast and ride across to Steelman's," O'Hara said. "If he thinks it's true he'll advise you what is best to do."

"You're shoutin'. The Old Man will tell me what to do. I been drug into this. If I'd started trouble I wouldn't make no holler, but I didn't do any such thing. Still an' all, I expect I'd better hive out for parts unknown."

Fitch ate his breakfast, rolled and smoked a cigarette, and said he reckoned he would be going. He swung to the saddle, waved a hand in farewell, and rode over the hill. Not one of the three had any premonition of the desperate adventure into which they would be driven within the hour.

Famous Santa Fe Trail Linked With Coronado

It was in 1541 that Coronado followed the future line of the Santa Fe trail, probably as far as the site of Wichita, and that date, though the suggestion as to earlier years fails to response, deserves some sort of commemoration. The Santa Fe trail or portions of it, must have known the sweep of more than one ancient migration before Coronado's day—perhaps descending from the North, perhaps coming up out of the crowded old civilizations of the South—but its known history began with Coronado.

And what a history it was through more than 300 years! It was the first of the great beaten tracks which joined the American East and West. It never approached in populousness those later northern routes that went from the Mississippi to Oregon and California, nor was its traffic notable for the riches carried. But where the other trails went into an almost virgin territory, the Santa Fe trail linked two opposing civilizations.

West and south along its course, following the pioneers, the traders and the buffalo hunters, went that tide from the Middle West which battled and finally supplanted and transplanted traditions and life of far-off Spain. —Boston Herald.

Vierling Kersey, state superintendent of public instruction, definitely announced that a bill to establish a state educational equalization fund will be introduced at the coming legislative session with the backing of his department. Fifteen hundred and eighty tons of steel all in a chunk, forming the 328-foot lift span of the Southern Pacific's new Suisun Bay bridge from Martinez to Benicia, is the largest thing of its sort in the world. Not only is it the largest lift span, but it is believed by the rail firm's engineering department to be by far the weightiest object of any sort that is regularly lifted and then dropped back into place. And every time the 1580 tons go up or down, their counterweights of equal weight do the same—in the opposite direction. To move the tremendous span there are two 150-horsepower electric motors, with a single 200-horsepower gasoline motor provided for emergency use.

Delegates attending the California State Grange convention at Napa announced the selection of Sacramento for the 1931 sessions. The State Grange was organized in Napa fifty-seven years ago.

WEYLER, THE BUTCHER

General Valeriano Weyler of Spain, who died a few days ago at the age of 92, was the last of the officers of high rank who sought to suppress the final revolution of Cubans against Spanish rule. To his ruthless policy was largely due the popular indignation which finally led the United States to espouse the cause of the Cubans in 1898 and win their freedom.

Weyler was sent to Cuba in 1896, shortly after which he adopted a most brutal "reconcentration" system whereby Cuban women and children were herded in concentration camps, where thousands suffered and died. He became generally known throughout Cuba and the United States as "Weyler, the Butcher," and as such he is remembered in the western hemisphere.

He was recalled from Cuba in 1897, but the sentiment against Spain because of his acts was crystallized by the destruction of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor on the night of February 15, 1898, and made war ineveitable. Soon Cuba was freed from Spanish rule forever.

Weyler later became captain-general of Madrid and held numerous important military commands. About four years ago he was court-martialed on a charge of plotting to overthrow the government, but was acquitted, and had since lived quietly in retirement.

FEED THE HUNGRY

There appears to be considerable merit in the suggestion by William G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury, that some of the sixty million bushels of wheat now held by the Farm Board be used to feed the poor this winter.

This wheat was bought by the Farm Board and is being held in the hope that it may be sold at some future time at a higher price. Mr. McAdoo does not believe the price will be higher for a good while, so long as it is known that this surplus is still in existence, even though it is temporarily held off the market. He asks:

"Why then should it be hoarded instead of being used for the beenfit of the people—its real owners? When Congress reconvenes in December it ought to authorize the use of as much of this wheat as may be needed to feed hungry and distressed human beings this winter."

The hungry should be fed, regardless of other consequences. Mr. McAdoo's plan would relieve suffering and reduce the wheat surplus, without a doubt. It would cost the taxpayers something, but the taxpayers generally are in for losses on the farm relief program anyway. In the long run these losses might be less if the plan suggested were adopted.

When Wall Street bulls go on a rampage again it will be news.

SINCE ADAM AND EVE

"Since Adam delved and Eve span" the job of being parents has been at once the most important and the most difficult job of life. One of the most truthful statements ever made is found in "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." The infant of today is truly the citizen of tomorrow, and upon the health, the training and the scope for success of the infant of our nation depends the health, the training and the success of our nation.

Being parents today in Daly City is not the job it was when we were "the walked" and not the "walkers" those long nights through. In those days, from the entrance of the youngster into this world of living, to the day when he first became of independent age, there was not the round of scientific preparation and aids which today have been achieved.

In this age, "Better Baby" contests begin the highly competitive life of the infants,and continue in competition on up through football and business conquests of later life; and all the way their progress is marked with training and advantages never known before.

Here in Daly City, with our hearts (as human hearts always will be) turned toward the toddlers who are the center of our life, we must keep in mind the health conditions, recreational possibilities, and governing restrictions which affect them.

A better educated group of parents will mean a better and safer childhood period for the children of our town. On every hand we have available information which will help us in this our biggest job.

It will mean that more of them will grow up to healthful manhood and womanhood; it will mean that they will be clearer thinking men and women, and it will help to keep them here to repeat in their own turn this greatest job in Daly City.

HONOR AFTER FORTY YEARS

A belated honor came to one of agriculture's greatest benefactors a few days ago, when Prof. Stephen M. Babcock of the University of Wisconsin was given a gold medal and $5,000 in cash in recognition of a service performed forty years ago. He is now 87 years old.

It was in 1890 that Prof. Babcock perfected a method of determining the exact percentage of butterfat in milk. The process consists simply in adding a proper quantity of sulphuric acid to the milk contained in special long-necked bottles, whirling them for a short time, when the butterfat will rise to the top and the amount can be read off by means of scale marks on the bottle necks.

Instead of patenting his process, Prof. Babcock gave it to the world, and it has been in use ever since. Watered milk has on chance of getting by when this test is applied. As Governor Hoard of Wisconsin once said: "It has made more dairymen honest than the Bible has ever made."

The prize mentioned was given by Senator Capper of Kansas for "the most distinguished service to American agriculture." Perhaps everyone will agree that the prize was worthily bestowed, not only because of the importance of Prof. Babcock's discovery, but also because of his generosity in freely giving it to the public, instead of taking the rich money rewards which a patent would have assured him.

Crime cost the United States more than seven billion dollars last year, and the Pathfinder remarks that we had quite a bit of crime to show for it.

PADEREWSKI'S RETURN

Ignace Jan Paderewski, the world's most famous pianist, who was 70 years old on November 6, has returned to America for a series of 72 concerts which will end next May. In spite of his age, it is said that the veteran musician plays with much of his former brilliancy.

Paderewski is not only a great musician, but an eminent statesman and humanitarian as well. In 1900 he established a prize fund for American composers in appreciation of the cordial reception accorded him in his numerous concert tours in this country. During the war he devoted the proceeds of his concerts to the relief of Polish war sufferers, later organized Polish volunteers in the United States for service with the allied armies in Europe.

When the new Polish republic was organized at the close of the war, Paderewski took a leading part in its establishment and became its first premier. Although artistic skill and a talent for statesmanship are rarely combined in the same person, Paderewski performed patriotic services of a high order during the first years of the new nation, of which he is a native.

While he has made much money in his lifetime, his generosity has been so lavish that he is now, as he himself admits, a relatively poor man. His present tour is being made in an effort to place himeself in more comfortable circumstances.

The affectionate regard in which he has been held by the American people since his first appearance in New York in 1891 will doubtless insure him the warm welcome to which his fine character and extraordinary musicianship entitle him.

LITTLE GIRL'S BIG JOB

Governor Huey P. Long of Louisiana, recently nominated for the United States Senate, maintained his reputation for doing unusual things a few days ago by appointing Miss Alice Lee Grosjean, 24 years old, to be secretary of state.

For six years Miss Grosjean has been Long's confidential secretary, and has been his able partisan in his numerous political controversies. The sudden death of Secretary of State Bailey gave him an opportunity to reward her loyalty by giving her this $7,000 job, a salary only $500 a year less than his own.

Miss Grosjean is described as a pretty, petite, hazel-eyed, auburn-haired young woman, and her published photograph bears out the description. She was married at the age of 15 and divorced her husband three years ago, resuming her maiden name.

Anyway, Miss Grosjean is secretary of the great state of Louisiana, the first woman to hold a state cabinet office.

CAT PSYCHOLOGY

What does a cat do when it sees a rat? Sounds like a foolish question, doesn't it? And ordinarily it would be, but Zing Yang Kuo, a noted Chinese psychologist, says it all depends on the cat's bringing up.

After innumerable experiments with 59 kittens in his laboratory, he finds that sometimes cats and rats become affectionate playmates. This occurs when the cats and rats are placed together practically from birth. Even without this contact, only 45 per cent of his kittens attempted to kill rats unless they had seen their mothers do it, while after seeing a rat killed nearly all followed the mother's example.

So, Prof. Kuo says, "our studies show that kittens can be made to kill a rat, to love it, to hate it, to fear it, or to play with it."

All of which is interesting, even though the practical benefit of this knowledge of rat psychology is not apparent to the layman.

QUEER FAMILY MUDDLE

A case is reported which presents an unusual problem of relationship among the members of a certain California family. The man in the case has found a solution of the problem by giving himself up for bigamy.

Ten years ago he married a supposed widow, a Mrs. Stapleton, who had a 16-year-old daughter. Hearing later that his wife had a living husband in Texas, he left her and married the daughter, who has since borne him three children.

Recently he learned that Stapleton had really died before the widow's remarriage, consequently he finds himself with two wives on his hands, one of whom is his mother-in-law and the other his step-daughter, while his three children are the grandchildren of his first wife. A rather awkward situation for all concerned.

FALSE CAR ECONOMY

Nearly everyone who owns an automobile complains of the expense of upkeep and this expense does seem unnecessarily high in many cases. Yet repair men declare that about two-thirds of all failures of automotive machinesry are caused by false economy in the use of lubricating oil.

Faulty lubrication may occur in either of two ways—the oil may be insufficient in quantity or inferior in quality. Negligence with respect to either of these points means excessive repair bills and shortened life for the car.

Still, the expense necessary to obtain efficient and motor-saving lubrication is very small. Even the finest oil, made from pure Pennsylvania crude, is but a few cents a gallon, while the damage to motors caused by a failure to supply high-grade lubrication often runs into hundreds of dollars.

One expert automobile authority recently suggested that every motorist might well paste on his windshield the reminder, "Oil is cheap; machinery is expensive." To provide proper lubrication is merely to apply horse sense in a horseless age.

Unfortunately, a quiet home wedding doesn't insure a quiet home life thereafter.

The Biggest and Best Job on Earth

And what IS the "biggest and best job on earth?"
"PARENTHOOD—the raising of happy, healthy children!" answers a world of proud mothers and fathers.
And THEY ARE RIGHT!
PARENTHOOD is the "biggest and best job on earth!"
And CHILDREN are the most valuable property of our community.
Strange idea, isn't it?—but it is true.
The acid test of any community is, "Is this a good place in which to bring up a child?"
"More and better babies" is a safe and good slogan for the betterment of any community.
Of course we know that this is the best town in the world for a baby to be born in, but even the BEST can be BETTERED.
Many serious ills in after life are the result of child sicknesses. Failure in after life—even a large share of criminality—depends, to a great degree, on child habit and training.
Children's sicknesses are practically all contagious. This is a community responsibility. It is a matter on which no home can stand alone.
And, although raising children is primarily a job for the parent and the home, IT IS ALSO A SCHOOL, CHURCH, and CIVIC RESPONSIBILITY.
Every baby is important to its own parents, but it is also important and valuable to us all and to our community.
Every baby should be weighed, measured and examined for known and unknown defects. They should be taken to the doctor when they are "perfectly well." We should be working to spare them future illnesses, and should guard them against diptheria, typhoid, smallpox and other preventable sicknesses. Every child should have a complete physical examination at least once a year—teeth, eyes, throat, legs, feet—every part of the body should be examined.
We all want to give our babies a fair start toward a useful and happy life.

The baby of today is our citizen of tomorrow—and every business and professional man and woman is interested in helping the mothers and fathers of this community with the "biggest and best job on earth"—raising happy, healthy children in

CAMPAIGN STRESSES 'KEEP TO THE RIGHT'

Motorists who fail to keep as far as possible to the right hand side of the street or highway are the object of an educational and enforcement campaign to be conducted throughout November by the California Committee on Public safety with the co-operation of state and local traffic authorities. Violation of the "keep to the right" rule is declared to be one of the most frequent causes of motor vehicle accidents.

The decision of the committee to make this unsafe driving practice the subject of a state-wide campaign was the result of observations showing that many motorists make a practice of holding close to the center of the road. The danger of this habit is that other traffic moving in the same direction is either forced to swing to the left side of the road in order to pass the offending motorists, or to pass on the right. The latter maneuver is a violation of the law, it is pointed out by the legal department of the California State Automobile Association, which is assisting the committee.

According to Senator Arthur H. Breed, chairman, the view of the committee is that the motorist who insists upon clinging to the center of the road deserves to be termed a "road hog," and is one of the most serious menaces to the safety of the motoring public.

The California Vehicle Act requires that a motorist must drive as close to the right hand edge of the highway as is practical under conditions which may prevail. Careful observance of this law, it is declared, would assist traffic to move more freely and bring about a marked reduction in accidents.

"When driving, keep to the right and save a life," is the phrase adopted by the committee as a slogan. It will be given wide circulation through the press, radio, and other avenues of public contact.

The first ten days of the month are being devoted to educational efforts among motorists along these lines. Thereafter the state highway patrol and local traffic authorities will place special emphasis upon apprehending motorists who violate the "keep to the right" regulation.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or even increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store. Edwards' Drug Store, Mission street, near San Jose avenue. —Adv.

CONSOLIDATION OF BANKS PERFECTED

At 438 points in California last Monday, November 3, the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association and the Bank of America, an affiliated state bank, opened their doors for business as direct sucessors to Bank of Italy Natinoal Trust and Savings Association and Bank of America of California.

Combined resources of the institution exceed one and one quarter billion dollars, while the aggregate capital investment, together with the wholly owned subsidiary, Corporation of America, and the securities company, Bancamerica Company, will be in excess of $230,000,000. In the scope of territory covered, the extent of its branch system, and the number of its customers, the new organization is the largest in the United States.

Directors of the bank include both boards of the consolidated institutions. E. J. Nolan will be chairman, A. J. Mount, president, and C. R. Bell, Leon Bocqueraz, G. A. Davidson, W. W. Garthwaite and Orro E. Monnette, vice-chairmen.

Prominent among the committee appointments are James A. Bacigalupi, L. M. Giannin and P. C. Hale, constituting the advisory committee.

Other senior executives include: H. H. Ashley, F. N. Belgrano, Jr., W. E. Benz, W. E. Blauer, R. Bocqueraz, W. A. Bonynge, R. B. Burmister, Oscar L. Cox, Arthur Crites, C. P. Cuneo, J. M. Dupas, H. R. Erkes, Louis Ferrari, Edward H. Geary, A. P. Giannini, A. J. Gock, Morgan Gunst, W. H. Harrelson, Irving Hellman, Marco Hellman, A. W. Hendrick, W. J. Kieferdorf, John G. Mattos, Jr., W. H. McGinnis, J. E. McGuigan, W. F. Morrish, A. Pedrini, R. M. Philleo, G. W. Schmidt, R. E. Trengove, A. E. Sbarboro, W. L. Vincent (cashier), George A. Webster, E. J. Wightman, Howard Whipple, W. R. Williams, and R. R. Yates.

Although a purely California institution, Bank of America represents the culmination of a plan long contemplated by A. P. Giannini, looking toward the ultimate advent of nationwide branch banking.

"We are confident that the consolidated institution will provide a more comprehensive and better banking service," Mount said in commenting on the merger. "We are giving every attention to facilities and services which will enable us to function in an even more satisfactory manner than in the past. Our purpose in accomplishing this merger has not been merely to attain magnitude of capital investment and resources, but rather to increase the scope and usefulness of the consolidated institution.

"We believe that a great bank has a potentiality of service which constitutes a challenge to the imagination, and that we have a public responsibility in measuring up to our enlarged opportunities."

The consolidation of the two banks and their affiliated companies has been completed withou reduction in personnel.

SCIENTIFIC STUDY OF FIRE PREVENTION

The study of fire control is said be almost as old as the history of man, but in former centuries effort was chiefly given to working out ways and means of keeping fires from spreading.

Scientific work designed to prevent the occurrence of fire is of very recent origin and most of the progress has been made in the last three decades.

Organized fire prevention, according to an authority, first came into being in Ohio. In that state the nation's first fire prevention association was formed, the second fire marshal's law was passed, the first Safe and San Fourth of July authorized, and the first state building code committee created. These Ohio organizers were called to other states to assist in starting similar movements. Fire prevention was given official government support when, in 1920, Woodrow Wilson proclaimed Fire Prevention Day, which has since become Fire Prevention Week.

Now, due mainly to the work of such organizations as the National Board of Fire Underwriters, intensive fire prevention activities—ranging in scope all the way from promotion of better building laws to the apprehension of arsonists—are carried on throughout the nation. Our fire waste is still gigantic—but it is the fault of citizens if they have neglected to learn the rules of fire prevention. It is to be hoped that some day we will fully realize the tragedy of waste, and fight, as a nation, against it.

"Times have certainly changed," sighed Smith.

"How so?" asked Robinson.

GAS TEACHES DEAF AND DUMB

A new and extraordinary use for gas has come into being in London. It is announced that an ordinary gas flame is being successfully used to teach deaf and dumb children the letters of the alphabet. The method consists in showing each child how he or she may make the gas flame jump and flicker at a varying rate with the current of air produced in speaking the different letters. The average pupil can learn the alphabet in this way in three months.

ANNUAL RALLY DAY AT CALVARY CHAPEL

Sunday morning at Sunday School, Calvary Chapel will hold its annual Rally Day. The various classes will have separate parts on the program. A picturization in the form of a one reel motion picture will be given of "The Good Samaritan." At the 6:30 hour, just before the B. Y. P. U. services begn, two religious reels of motion pictures will be shown. The first reel will deal with "The Valley of Dry Bones." In outline it consists of a showing of the huge rock-hewn chambers, the tombs of the kings of Israel. Gordon's Calvary. Jeremiah's Grotto. Tomb of Joseph of Arimathea. The other reel will show the means of "Transportation in the Holy Land." In it will be seen the human burden bearers. Caravans. A camel corrall. The inevitable donkey. Modern transportation—the automobile. The well—a general meeting place. David Street, Jerusalem.

At the morning hour the pastor will speak on "Good and Evil Angels" or "Footprints of Angels in Fields of Revelation." The topic for the evening church service will be "The Painted Face—Jezebel." Jezebel has also been called "The worst hated woman in the Bible" or again "The Lady Macbeth of the Old Testament." We truly find in Jezebel a woman whose name has become a synonym for all that is basest and most bloody. Here is a woman whose life ended in direst and ghastliest tragedy. And everyone feels that it should have been so, for she reaped what she had sown. Many have asked how did she come to be the monster that she was? How did Jezebel come to be a name to make us shudder? These questions and many others will be answered regarding this notorious woman of Old Testament days.

The Wednesday night's prayer meetings have grown with continued interest. This hour has been turned into a period of close Bible study. At present the First Epistle of Peter is being studied. To many, as the result of these Bible study hours the Bible has become a great delight and a new Book to them. Many of us know that Lady Jane Grey was a great Bible reader, and while her parents were attending the chase, she would remain at home studying its pages. Her friends were surprised naturally, and inquired her reason for doing so. She replied, "All amusements of that description are but a shadow of the pleasure which I enjoy in reading this Book." Come and join us Wednesday nights in the great pleasure of Bible study.

CHARLES WOESSNER, Pastor.

"It ain't necessary, lady; there ain't nobody's husband here, never," was the colored man's reply.
